Photos by Colin Sussingham Interview by Jawn Doe

What'd you do this weekend?

We skated all weekend and then went to this insane roof party in the city. It was like a weird high school reunion vibe, but it got crazy and there was a fight and shit. It was a sick roof though.

How long have you been in NYC?

7 years.

What brought you there?

I came here to go to college, but I really just wanted to come to skate. That was probably the main reason.

How many tickets have you gotten since being in NYC?

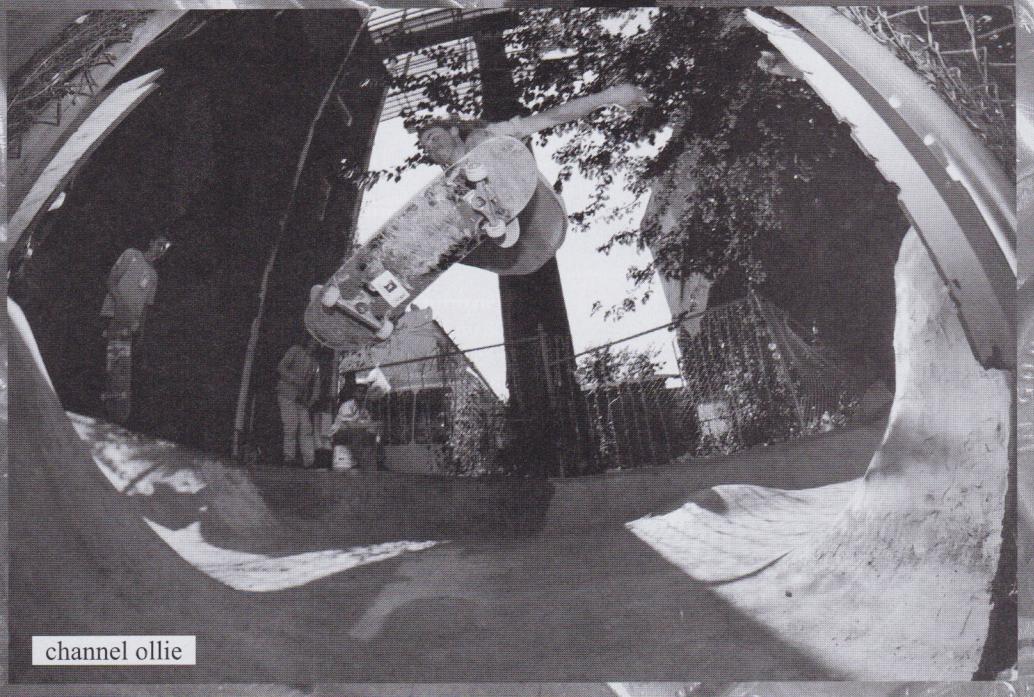

Tickets? For skating? Probably like two. Andrew and them get tickets all the time, I don't know why. As soon as I started hanging out with them I started getting tickets, but I never used to.

Ever been arrested?

Not officially, but very close.

bs smith p- Joe Inglis

channel ollie

bs tail

What was the closest?

Probably some shit in Ohio for skating a convention center parking garage. Cops in Ohio just go ape shit. They threw my friends in the back of a cop car and handcuffed them. We all ran and they kept chasing us around downtown Columbus but they couldn't find us. They eventually released our friends and they walked right by us, but had to pretend like they didn't know us so the cops wouldn't come get us too.

What's Ohio like?

It's very consistent. It doesn't change very much. It's cool, there's some sick spots but they're few and far between. And everything's really nice.

What's Cleveland like?

I've never really been there. I hear that it's really shitty. A bunch of my friends are from there and they all tell me it's really shitty.

took it over and made it into a miniature skatepark.

What is Iglo?

Iglo crew is all my friends from Ohio who grew up skating together. You know when you're growing up skating with all your friends, it's like the best days of your lives and nothing matters. So that's like our skate crew from Ohio.

Favorite place to skate?

The Wendy's bank.

Favorite place to drink?

The Emerson or the side yard.

Favorite NYC rapper?

Big L.

Favorite NYC artist?

William Klein.

What do you think about nicknames?

I love nicknames, they're huge in Ohio. Everyone is really into slang out here but nicknames are the main thing in Ohio.

Best alternative to a pillow?

Skateboard, backpack, or shoes.

fs nose p- Max Hull

crooks

Were you almost in a fight at the bar the other night? What happened?

I was playing pool and some idiot said I didn't call my shot correctly. I was tired of being there so I caused a scene just for fun. I heard later that he was the owner of the bar, but I'm not sure if that's true.

Do you have anybody's autograph?

I contemplate getting autographs all the time, but never really follow through. Almost got one earlier.

From who?

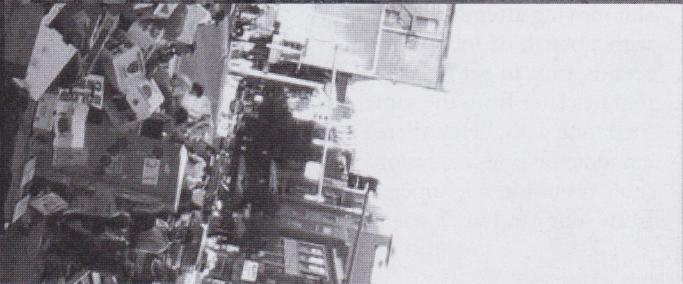

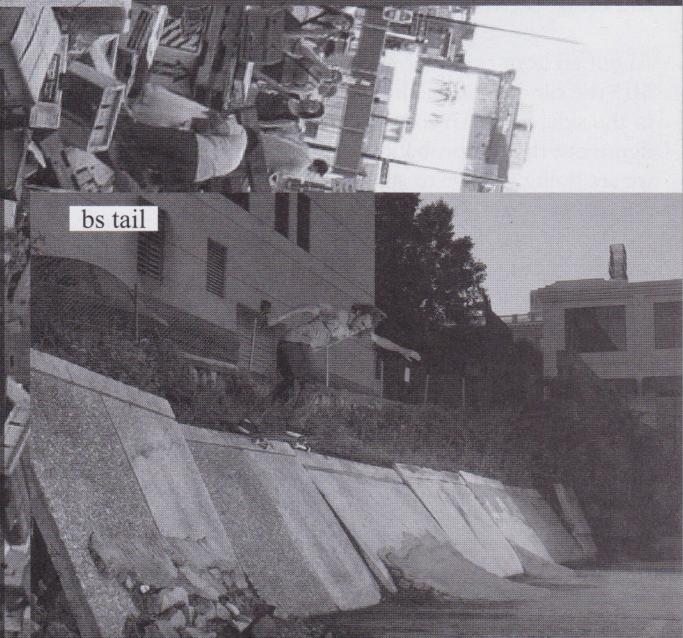

Alex Ito's parents.

What's the biggest purchase you've ever made?

Damn, maybe a camera or probably all together the side yard.

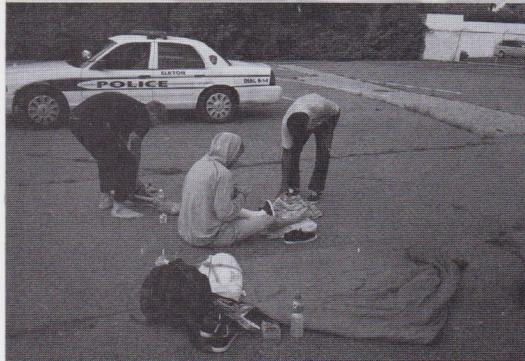

What could NYC do to improve quality of life?

Close the income gap, less stress, better transportation, and free S.Pellegrino.

The original plans to take my car bailed because I had tire issues I couldn't get resolved in time. So Jeff let us ride along in his, which was favorable to a cramped egg. The ride up was smooth and fun. Then we get a battery light, check it out in the manual, and for some reason decide to continue on.

About an hour outside of Philly in Elkton, MD the car dies on the highway. We coast to the side, get AAA to tow us, then halfway figure out that it's probably the alternator and we are going to have to stay overnight and get it fixed the next morning.

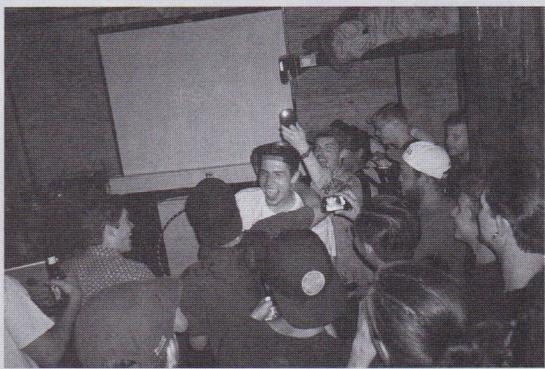

We opt to walk next door to a closed down Denny's and sleep in the back parking lot, away from the view of the street so we can polish off a 1/2 bottle of Jameson to pass out. Next thing we know we are waking up to two of Elkton's finest kicking us in our sides to wake us up. We explain the situation, they run our info and let us off. We spend the next 5-6 hours sitting around at a Firestone to get the alternator and battery replaced. Finally, we get shit moving after dealing with a bunch of inbred retard, only to get a call 5 minutes later from the same Firestone with, "Hey, there's a puddle of power steering fluid in our lot, might be from your car. How's your steering feel?" We continue on our way to Philly thinking it wasn't ours, and as soon as we get to there, the power steering is shot. We meet up with Matt McKeen at his place, skate to Pop's skatepark for a hot session then dip back to the house to charge/chill. It wouldn't have been a first time Philly trip without hitting FDR, so we stopped by there for a session and finally met up with a few of the

Jeff Fuchs bs d

Guzzle homies from NYC. I snapped a few photos of Jeff and then we went and got cheese steaks at Tony Luke's.

The next part of the trip is kind of a blur. We went to the Skate Jawn 3 Year Anniversary party and the long awaited premiere of Kevin Winter's video BRUNS. Walking to the Jawn warehouse we crushed a bottle of New Amsterdam on the way, with the majority of it getting faced by Fuchs. We got there, met up with homies, shot the shit, drank from the keg, checked out the photo show, etc. I think there was a keg distributor next door or something because they kept showing up with new kegs, three total I think, maybe four. Anyway, the video finally starts and every trick landed results in a 15 second mosh pit fueled by open bottles of cheap champagne and thrown beers. The video was insane and is going to be a favorite for everyone. After the video, more drinking. Half the Adidas team is there so we talk their heads off. Some really weird girl is lugging around a massage chair and offering massages to sweaty, beer soaked skateboarders. My crew split back to the house and apparently a rampage ensued that I wasn't a part of. I end up sticking around and hopping in Colin Sussingham's Guzzle Island Tours van and staying with a homie of theirs.

We wake up the next day convinced last night was the most we had ever drank and walk around in slow motion for most of the day. Eventually we hit a Firestone to get power steering fluid for Jeff's car and head out back to Richmond.

Thanks to Marcus and the Skate Jawn homies for throwing such a rad party and congrats on three years of being the best East Coast zine out. Thanks Colin and Guzzle for the hospitality, and thanks Matt McKeen for putting us up for a few nights.

TEXT BY JAWN CASSANDRA

I bought my first (and only) house in winter of 2003. That spring we started construction on the Hoodlum mini. Our mastermind was Randy Bednarz, a local genius and old school skater who used to manage a skateshop. With his building ingenuity and the laboring of myself and fellow skaters, it took about a month to erect this monstrous backyard ramp of 4 feet high and 20 feet wide, with a 4 foot deck and a 8 foot party deck. This year we had to replace the flat bottom and cut the party deck down to the regular 4 feet after weathering storms and almost 10 years of shredding.

We've set it on fire, set off mild explosives on it, skated the hell out of it, and it still stands with little maintenance and repairs. To add to the fun we built a deck off our house that you can skate down one side to a little decline and over a gap or set up a rail on to some pavement. All kinds of homies have stopped by to shred. It's been a blast and a great reason to have a keg party. Thanks to all the homies who skated it and helped build it. To another 10 years, and see you at the next party...

My good friend Lawrence had wanted to build a DIY quarterpipe at this undisclosed location for as long as I can remember. Being an ex-scout, Lawrence received the merit badge in woodworking, and if it were up to me, I'd give him a commendable in gnar. He put his training to the test and it certainly paid off. We persevered through the blood, sweat, and beers, and ended up building a solid spot for (almost) everyone to enjoy. These photos were taken during the first and second construction missions over Summer 2012, on my Yashica MAT-124 G. More foundation footage can be found in our homie video "BeachCooler".

fs wallride, George

I've taken a lot of skate trips, but they've always involved piling into a van and driving to Philly or New York City for a couple days. Not only was this my first time flying somewhere to skate, but also my first trip to the West Coast.

The crew was Neal, Stan, George, Rory, Allen and myself. After work on Friday we flew from DC to Portland, and immediately after landing we could tell this place was a lot different from the East Coast.

Three observations about Portland:

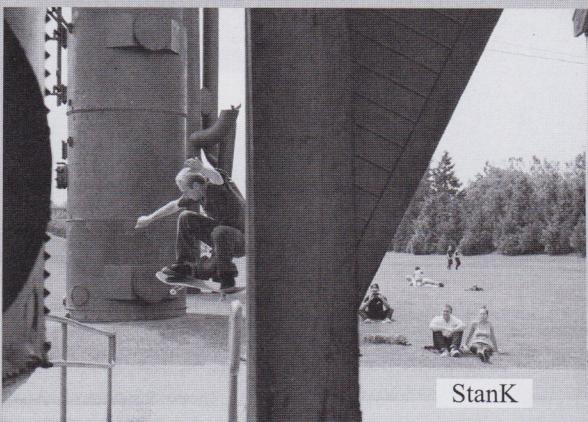

1. Amazing, inexpensive food. Each meal was better than the last, and even sit-down places would only run you about $10-$15 for a bangin meal and a cold beer (keep in mind we are used to paying DC prices). Go to Pok Pok.
2. Demographics. I don't think I saw one black person during the three days we were in Portland. Coming from DC (50% black) and Philly (44% black), this was really weird.

Stan, ollie

3. Cops don't seem to mind skating. Maybe we just got lucky, but when we got booted from a spot, they would say things like "Hey guys, I'm sorry to ask you to do this, but would you mind taking it somewhere else?" Sometimes I couldn't even think of a response because I was so shocked at what they were saying.

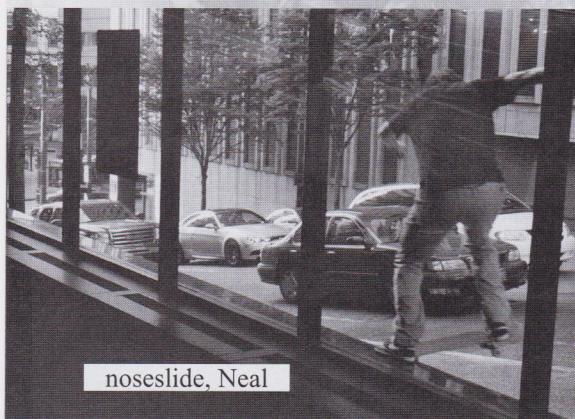

One of the best parts of Portland was a strip joint that was highly recommended by just about anybody we talked to; Acropolis. Over 50 beers on tap, good steaks, and an excellent view. The cherry on top was when one of the lovely ladies put on Bone Thugz' "First of the Month" and we realized it actually was June 1st.

StanK

On Monday we left Portland, headed for the coast, and spent the next four days checking out Goonies landmarks and hanging out in a temperate rain forest. Neal managed to spend a night alone on the beach while the rest of us battled rabid raccoons for the last s'more.

On Thursday we made it to Seattle, which featured more balanced demographics and prices that reminded us of home (not cheap). Smoking is legal in the state of Washington, and it was wild to see people of all walks of life sparking whenever and wherever they pleased. One of the best treats was the THC-infused sour cola gummies. The wallrides at Garfield High School (also where Jimi Hendrix went to school) are awesome. I'm not sure what the purpose of all that concrete is, but I'm not complaining either. Both Seattle and Portland had endless crusty nuggets that would please anyone from the East Coast.

noseslide, Neal

Xeno was our unofficial tour guide and motivational speaker for the Portland leg of the trip. He hooked us up with spots, smoke, and was more than happy to sleep on a table next to the washing machine.

melon, Stan

I'd recommend this trip to anyone who has never been to the West Coast and likes skating crust. I also had more fun camping than I probably ever will. The legal smoke is a huge plus as well. Special thanks to Xeno, Miller, Matt House, and Scott Ragsdale. No thanks to I-5 or the deranged Jimmy Buffet. Stick boys.

What are we doing right now?

Chilling at the DMV in San Francisco, CA.

Did you just shotgun a beer?

Yes, I absolutely did. I was forced to.

What do you do to support your habits?

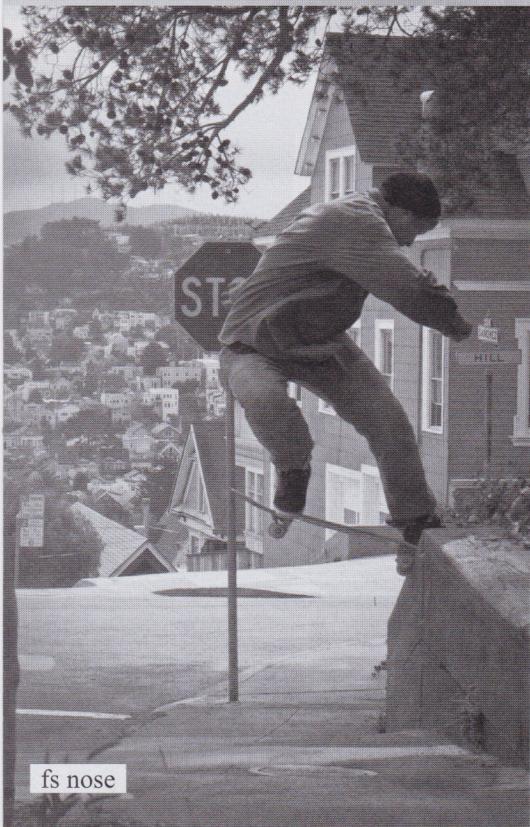

I work a job. I cook. Uhh, yup that's about it, I cook.

Why do you hate it so much?

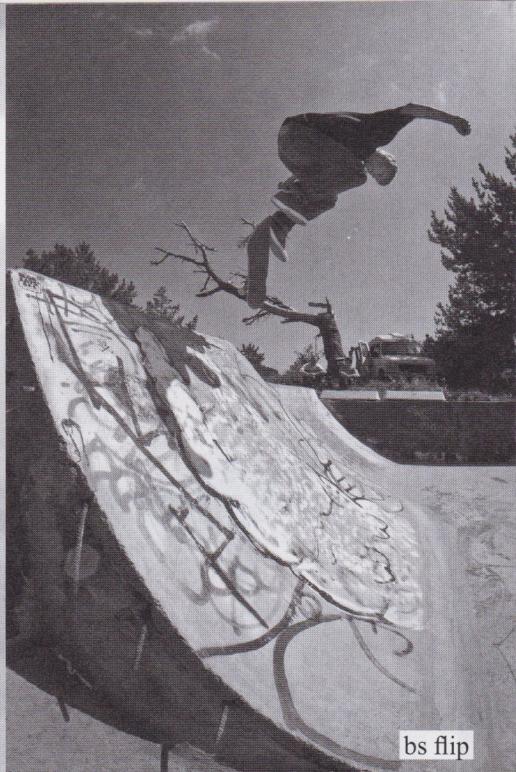

(laughs) Cause I'm not skating. That's a simple ass question.

Why do you go so fast?

I would say faster is better in every way of life, but the females wouldn't say that's true.

Has anyone ever told you to slow down?

Ron Rodriguez.

Why do you get so angry?

I don't know man, it's a frustrating thing. Skateboarding is a fucking mind game and when you expect a certain level out of yourself and you can't achieve that, inside your head you get frustrated. That's why I do, especially with my knee. It all comes down to my knee.

How many knee surgeries have you had?

I've had two as of right now. I'm assuming it's gonna be more.

Why is nothing ever good enough?

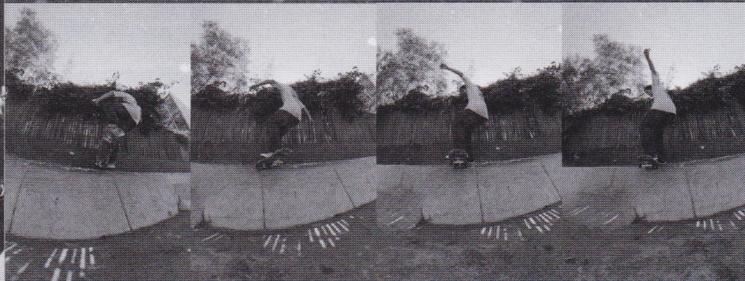

Cause having what you want just isn't enough.

What is the L.I.S. crew?

Ron's got two schools of thought on this. So L.I.S. would be low impact skaters and then you have the majority of the skateboard world that fits into the other category which would be low income skaters. Low income skating is what almost everybody fits into. You know, if you're not sponsored or flowed or whatever, you have to fucking buy your own product and support yourself. You're a low income skater if you work a dead end job, you get your rent, you get your

Not as often as I used to. I used to break them shits like once a week, but then again I'm part of the L.I.S. crew now, so I can't afford it.

How old are you, and how long have you been skating?

I'm 26 years old and I've been skating for 12 years now.

You've had a lot of different sponsors over the years. Who are all your former sponsors?

I've had a few. I used to ride for Convoy skateboards out of Washington DC, All day skateshop in Leesburg, VA. I also rode for Adonai branded eternal, a Christian clothing company from Washington D.C. and Casual skateboards from Frederick, MD.

Who do you ride for now?

I currently ride for Word Skateboards, Tork Trucks, Bones Wheels flow, CCS flow, One Motion Skateboarding, CLS, and Fatal clothing.

Where you from?

Leesburg, VA.

You've been in North Carolina for a while, are you going to stay there?

INTERVIEW BY JAWN F KENNEDY

wallride

Where are you from?

I'm from Allentown, Pennsylvania.

Favorite thing about Allentown?

It's shitty and nice. There's skate spots and then there's not skate spots.

What do you think made you start skating?

I was 13 or 14 and a skatepark opened next to my house, Penn Skate. My dad took me there to check it out and was like "You wanna get a bike or some skates and come here?" His girlfriend used to take me to the skating rink, so they got me a pair of roller blades and I started roller blading there. I started going there a lot and getting to know the dude that works there, and the people that skate there. I found out that roller blading was really gay. Nobody liked it, and these dudes were always telling me "get a skateboard, get a skateboard." I was real young and didn't know what to do. One day my friend stopped roller blading cause it was gay and so did I. We both got skateboards. I was like that's it, I gotta fuckin do this shit. I went there every fuckin day on a skateboard getting yelled at for getting in older dudes way. And I used to push mongo. Ray Gurz would throw his board at me and tell me to push the right way.

What'd you do the first time you got drunk?

First time I got drunk this dude Eric Clark took a bottle of vodka and just started chugging it. He's six years older than me and he's like here, and hands it to me. I didn't know what the fuck I was doing and I remember throwing up all over myself and then somehow wound up at my house and then I got in trouble. My dad was not down with his 13 year old son having puke all over him. But that's what happened, I pretty much just blacked the fuck out.

You had to get some surgery recently?

I had back surgery and shoulder surgery. The back surgery was a really crazy, gnarly surgery that fucked me up for a while.

What happened? Why did you have to get the surgeries?

Right when I was starting skating I would have like weird pains down my legs. It was really rare, just every so often. It was something I thought would go away at some point and it didn't. As I got older it was just kinda there. When I got beat up or something I'd have this pain down my leg. It finally got worse when I moved out to California. I fuckin' couldn't keep up with everybody. I was laying in bed all day, like couldn't handle the pain. After I went to the doctor I found out what it was. I always thought it was just from like falling all the time, always hurting myself, but I guess it was like a birth defect. Some type of scoliosis where the bottom of my spine curved, therefore it caused the nerves to pinch my L5 f1, the last disc in your body before the tailbone. There's like bone and gel in your spine, in the middle of each disc, and there was like no gel there I guess. It was like bone on bone and that caused everything.

switch ollie

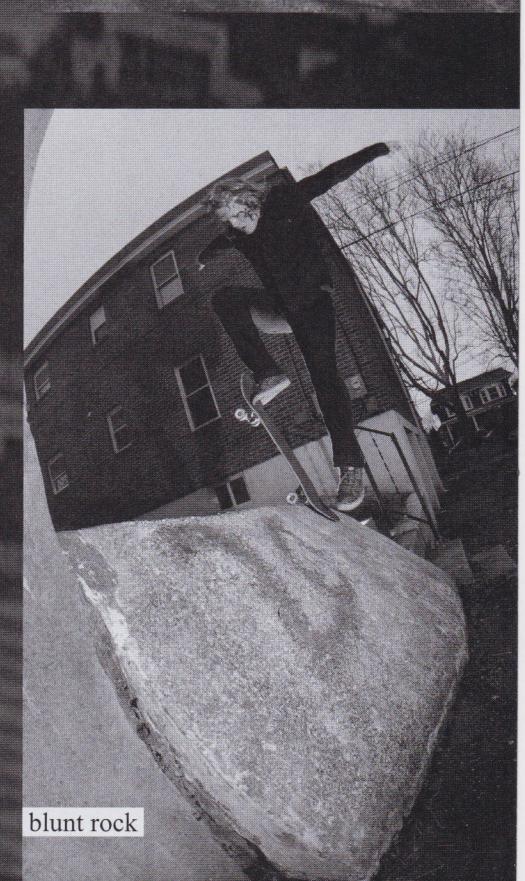

5-0

How long were you in the hospital?

I was in the hospital for a week and then I couldn't do anything for like eight months. I couldn't skate or fully do whatever I wanted for a year. I had to wear a back brace for six months. Almost the only thing I could do was walk a mile a day. That's what they wanted me to do. That was that, once the year was up it was fucking game on. After eight months of therapy you start feeling like a warrior, you know, you got that mindset like fucking go for broke.

Do you feel the same on your board? Do you still go to physical therapy?

That's actually the sickest thing about it. It fixed me. There's no pain and I can move my body in a way I never could like fs carves, fs rock and roll anything where my body is backside like that, I could never really do. And now I can fucking learn tricks I've never done before. Just on my board it's so much better. It's crazy how skating is like the whole world and I'm learning shit I've never done before because I couldn't. As for therapy I don't go to therapy anymore, but it's up to me to stretch every day, keep a strong core, just be healthy. If I don't stretch I just get aches and pains in my lower back from like being on my feet too long or not stretching. If I didn't keep up on that physical therapy or whatever on my own I'd be worse for sure.

blunt rock

Did you watch a lot of videos and follow what was going on while you were recovering?

I tried as much as possible to follow what was going on. I was all kinds of fucked up on pills and smoking weed on top of it. Honestly, a lot of those days were a blur. I'd fucking go on all the websites everyday and Luke would keep me posted.

What did you do to pass the time while you were recovering?

I did a lot of just drawing, arts and crafts shit. My dad would take me to the woods, and all kinds of places to walk. I got into rap music, a lot. I don't know why, but I started listening to rap music a lot more than I ever have. I don't know if this is shitty to say, but I fuckin smoke a lot of weed. I just fucking bugged out and went on walks, tried meditation and just artwork, music and that shit. Tried to get girls to hang out with me as much as possible.

Do you think we went to the moon, or nah?

That's a hard question. I seriously almost debate that everyday. That's something that I'm so curious about. It's such a hard thing to decide. I would say yes, but not the day and time that they showed it happen and shit.

Favorite East Coast skaters?

I'd have to go with Luke (Koch). He's like my brother from another mother, and fucking the way that guy skates is unbelievable. I think he skates like no other dude around. He's a beast. Also, Dan Pensyl, Jay Sigafoos, Mike Emery and Roy Carnage.

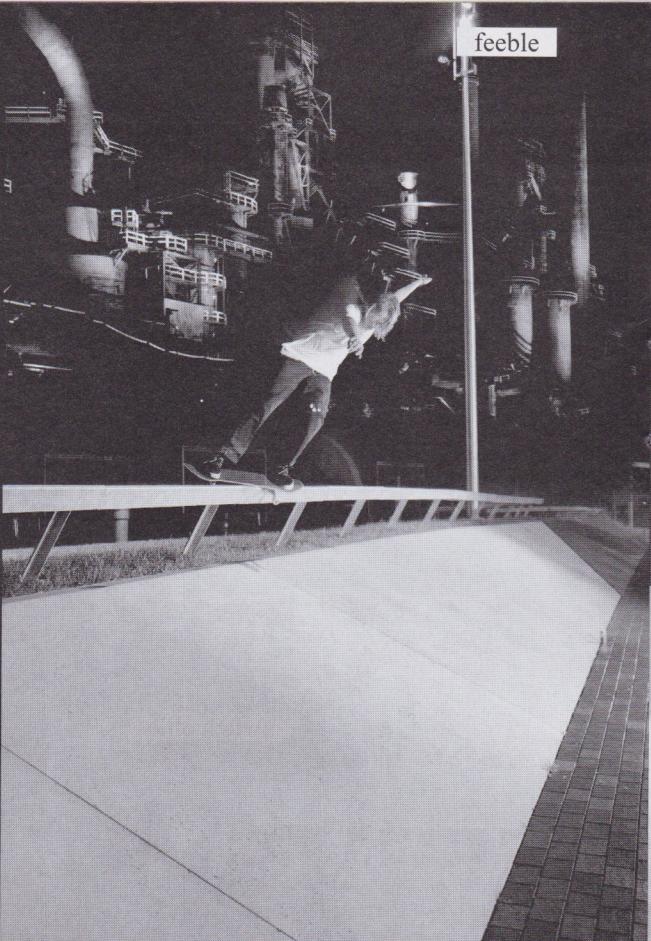

If you could go on a skate trip anywhere in the USA where'd you be trying to be out to?

I've never been to Skatopia, so that'd definitely be the place. I've wanted to go there for a long time.

Favorite game at the casino?

Definitely the roulette table. I have a weird thing about numbers and colors. I went there on my birthday at 3:33 pm, I was at the roulette table, I bet on black, won that shit. I can wrap my mind around that game, you know. Black or red, or if you want to go crazy and bet some numbers go ahead. But there's still a 50-50 chance. That's like my favorite one.

feeble

First tattoo?

I got the Love Park sign on my wrist, I was 16. That's when I first learned what street skating was. This dude that would go to Penn Skate would talk about how he'd always go skate Love Park and New York. He was way older but one day he took me and my friends. It was like Love Park at its prime. We showed up and Josh Kalis was there, Mike Maldonado, the whole pack. It was the first time I ever smelled weed. I don't know, I was like why don't I get the Love Park sign on my wrist.

Shout outs?

What's up to the 5boro crew, Long Island dudes, Lancaster bros, the old Berkeley crew, you guys in Philly doing Skate Jawn ,and A town trash Shout outs to fucking Homebase crew. Lost Soul skateboards is the company I ride for. We're just a group of guys who like to have fun on our skateboards and that's about it. Just never stop skating no matter what.
